Disruption to power supplies, lack of fuel and road access constraints, especially in the south of the island, are severely hampering emergency relief efforts to hurricane-affected people.

Due to roads' blockages, landslides, washed-out river valleys and destroyed bridges, humanitarian responders are unable to reach some of the most remote communities.

The road from Roseau to Portsmouth is accessible, however debris cover the road and there is ongoing risk of landslides.

Canefield Airport is open and both rotary and fixed-wing aircraft have been able to land.

Douglas-Charles Airport is open and has received certification to operate daytime. It can receive cargo jets up to B727 or C130 or similar.

Marigot's jetty is currently being used to bring in relief supplies.

Portsmouth jetty is still damaged.

Overview:

Date Created: September 2017

Map Reference: OpenStreetMap Contributors, MapAction

Data Sources: UNGIWG, GeoNames, GAUL, LC, CDEMA, © OpenStreetMap Contributors, MapAction

The road from Roseau to Portsmouth is accessible, however debris cover the road and there is ongoing risk of landslides.

Canefield Airport is open and both rotary and fixed-wing aircraft have been able to land.

Douglas-Charles Airport is open and has received certification to operate daytime. It can receive cargo jets up to B727 or C130 or similar.

Marigot's jetty is currently being used to bring in relief supplies.